

Chartered Institute of Environmental Health (CIEH)

The Chartered Institute of Environmental Health (CIEH) is a professional, awarding and campaigning organisation at the forefront of global environmental, public health and safety. It is also a registered charity and the professional voice for environmental health within the United Kingdom. The Chartered Institute of Environmental Health sets standards, accredits courses and qualifications for the education of its members and other Environmental Health Professionals.

The Chartered Institute of Environmental Health provides relevant and timely information, evidence and policy advice to local and national governments, environmental as well as public health practitioners in both the public and private sectors.

As an Awarding Organisation, CIEH provides over 60 certification qualification programmes which include food safety; health & safety; first aid; fire safety, and environmental protection through a global network of over 10,000 registered trainers and numerous training centres. The Chartered Institute supports its trainers and training centres with the necessary events and materials necessary to ensure its qualifications are delivered to the highest professional standards anywhere.

As a campaigning organisation, the Chartered Institute aims to promote improvements in environmental and public health policy. The organisation is based in the United Kingdom with offices in London, Wales and Northern Ireland. The Chartered Institute also operates in the United States of America, United Arab Emirates and Hong Kong, China.

The trading arm of the CIEH is a wholly owned subsidiary which is charged with promoting the mission of the CIEH through various trading activities. Profits are gift-aided to the CIEH to help support its charitable objectives. Conferences, seminars and a comprehensive range of public health publications are organised by this component of the organisation.

The Chartered Institute of Environmental Health is pleased to honour the memory of one of its members, Eric Foskett, the founding father of the International Federation of Environmental Health through the sponsorship of the Eric Foskett Award. The sponsorship of the Foskett Award is just one of many components of the charitable objectives and undertakings of the CIEH.

The Eric Foskett Award is only presented at IFEH World Congresses. It is awarded to either an individual or an organisation. Recipients must have made a notable contribution to the work of the Federation by helping it to fulfil its aims and objectives. This is the highest honour within the Federation.

The International Federation of Environmental Health would like to thank and recognize the Board of Directors and membership of the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health for their continued commitment and dedication to environmental health excellence through the sponsorship of the Eric Foskett Award.
