

The U.S.-based National Environmental Health Association (NEHA) is pleased to announce the release of its new logo, the first in over 40 years. The new design reflects the continued maturation of the Association and the profession. The bursting pedals signify a new era of environmental health, while the position of the pedals over the “eh” letters represent the shelter NEHA provides to the workforce through advocacy, education, and community. The bespoke, lower-case font is meant to convey the humble, service-oriented nature of the profession. Finally, the range of blue colored pedals acknowledges the importance of including diverse perspectives, practitioners, and experience to address the environmental challenges of today and beyond. You are encouraged to visit their new website at www.neha.org.
